From open-ended interview

*HV1: Yeah. Great. Wonderful. So we're done with this kind of survey questions. And now we're just interested in learning a little bit about like Child D's schedule. Like what does he day look like from when he wakes up till when he goes to bed?

*PAR: When he get up in the morning he dump the trash, get ready for school. When he get home in the evening he do his homework and he go out and play. Come back in, take his bath and go to bed.

*HV1: Is there anything in particular he likes to play in the afternoons?

*PAR: Basketball.

*HV1: Okay. Very nice. So we're interested in learning about Child D's just reading interests and the books that he likes. We're trying to get an idea – where would you say Child D gets most of his books from? You mentioned he goes to the library about once a week.

*PAR: Yeah. And then my mom, she gives us a lot of books. She buys a lot books from the dollar store.

*HV1: Great. So what, if anything, what are some things that you do to help Child D become a good reader? Are there any –

*PAR: Read with him.

*HV1: Can you tell me more what that looks like?

*PAR: What you mean?

*HV1: Like do you guys sit on the couch and –

*PAR: Yeah, or on the floor. We just read.

*HV1: Nice.

*PAR: Excuse me. Let me turn this pot down.

*HV1: Sure. We just have a couple more questions.

*PAR: Okay.

*HV1: So thank you. So what do you do when Child D has a hard time with a book?

*PAR: Like I said, I sit down and read with him, try to help him understand.

*HV1: Are there any questions you ask him when he's read a book or?

*PAR: Yeah. I ask him about just did he understand what he read and what the characters was and stuff like that.

*HV1: Great.

*PAR: Sometime he answers, sometime he don't. I don't know, Mom.

*HV1: Yeah. So is there anything that you've found really gets him excited about reading or helps motivate him to read?

*PAR: If it's a lot of action going on in the book. He loves that.

*HV1: Okay. Nice. Wonderful. Perfect. Thank you so much. These have been so helpful.

*PAR: I keep this?

*HV1: Yeah. You can keep that if you want. Hopefully we'll get some good books sent over to Child D this summer. Are you excited about getting these books in the mail? Nice.

*PAR: So he can tell his sister, this my book. These are mine. That's the first thing he'll say.

*HV1: You can put your name in it.

*PAR: They all competitive against each other.

*HV1: I remember that. Sibling.

*PAR: Very competitive.

other coded excerpts from home visit

*PAR: I like to sit down and help him with his homework. I didn't graduate from high school but I help him as much as I can. And if I can't help him, I try to find somebody that can help him, you know. I like to go to his games and stuff. We watch movies all the time.
